Counsel for Plaintiff Sara Rubenstein

Plaintiff Sara Rubenstein respectfully submits this reply memorandum of law in support of her motion, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23, for the appointment of the law firms of Shalov Stone & Bonner LLP (“SSB”) and Kalchein Salah as interim counsel for the proposed Class in this action.¹

ARGUMENT

I.

THE MLP GROUP’S MISSTATEMENTS OF RELEVANT FACTS SUPPORT THE CONCLUSION THAT SSB AND KALCHEIM SALAH SHOULD BE NAMED INTERIM COUNSEL

In large part, Plaintiff Rubenstein submits this reply memorandum to correct certain inaccuracies in the “reply” papers filed by the so-called “A Million Little Pieces Group” of plaintiffs (the “MLP Group”) and their counsel.² First, the MLP Group claims that it responded to Plaintiff Rubenstein’s request for the memorandum of understanding that outlines the settlement terms the MLP Group has “negotiated” with Defendants’ counsel. See MLP Opp. Mem. at 6. n.4. As proof of that assertion, the MLP Group submitted a two-page facsimile accompanied by a confirmation that one page of the document was sent. See Smith Reply Decl., Ex. D. Rubenstein’s counsel pointed this anomaly out to the MLP Group’s counsel prior to the time the MLP Group filed its opposition papers. See Reply Declaration of James P. Bonner (“Bonner Reply Decl.”) at ¶¶ 2-3.

Thus, it is apparent that: (a) Rubenstein’s counsel received no response from the MLP Group regarding her request for the memorandum of understanding; and (b) the MLP Group’s footnote description of the supposed correspondence with Rubenstein's counsel is misleading.³ More importantly, to this date, the MLP Group has refused to disclose to Rubenstein's counsel the memorandum of understanding or any of its terms. See Bonner Reply Decl. at ¶ 4. This bashful approach to unveiling the terms of the "settlement" hardly breeds confidence regarding its quality.

² Those papers were filed prior to the filing of the papers submitted by Plaintiff Rubenstein in opposition to the MLP Group’s motion for the appointment of Brodsky & Smith and Larry Drury Ltd. as co-interim counsel for the putative Class. Accordingly, the papers were not reply papers at all.

Second, contrary to the MLP Group's representations, SSB has been involved in this litigation since its commencement. That undeniable fact is evidenced by the letter to Defendant Random House's counsel that SSB and Kalcheim Salah wrote on behalf of a group of plaintiffs for the signature of Napoli Bern LLP, one of the counsel for the MLP Group. See Bonner Reply Decl., Ex. A.

That letter was sent after a conference call in which Napoli Bern, Meyers & Co. PLLC and Dale & Pakenas (all counsel for the MLP Group) participated with Mitch Kalcheim of Kalcheim Salah and James Bonner of SSB. See id. at ¶¶ 5-9. During that call, the participants agreed that Napoli Bern would draft a proposed letter to Random House regarding a potential settlement because Random House's counsel had undertaken some preliminary discussions with the Dale & Pakenas firm regarding a possible resolution of this action. Id. at ¶¶ 6-7. A redline of Napoli Bern's initial draft demonstrates that little of that letter survived the extensive editing undertaken by Kalcheim Salah and SSB. Id. at ¶ 8.

³ As the confirmation demonstrates, Rubenstein's counsel did not receive the faxed letter the MLP Group references. The best that can be said for the MLP Group is that its counsel attempted to send Rubenstein's attorney a letter refusing to forward the memorandum of understanding, but managed only to send a fax cover sheet that contained no relevant information (the first page of Exhibit D to the Smith Reply Declaration). The fact that the MLP Group's records reflect the transmission of a one-page fax demonstrates, however, that Exhibit D was not transmitted properly, and likely explains why Rubenstein's counsel has no record of receiving that document. See Bonner Reply Decl. at ¶ 3.

Moreover, when Kalcheim transmitted the re-drafted letter to the foregoing counsel for the MLP Group, he specifically stated that Bonner had assisted in revising the initial draft. Id. The letter's listing of counsel also reflects SSB's participation as Rubenstein's attorneys, as does a follow-up letter sent by Napoli Bern on April 19, 2006. Id., Ex. A.⁴ Thus, contrary to its representations, the MLP Group is well aware that SSB is no "Johnny Come Lately," even to the extent such considerations are relevant to the controlling question of which counsel are "best able" to represent the putative class. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g).⁵

II.

THE QUALITY OF THE PAPERS SUBMITTED BY THE PARTIES CONFIRMS THAT SSB AND KALCHEIM SALAH SHOULD BE NAMED INTERIM COUNSEL

The MLP Group's suggestion that the quality of its papers supports its choice of interim counsel is belied by the diverse collection of typos, grammatical errors and false statements that mar those documents. Indeed, a reader would be challenged to find a paragraph, much less a page, of the MLP Group's opposition brief that does not contain a typographical, factual, grammatical or legal error.

For example, the brief's opening sentence has a subject-verb agreement error (the proper verb for the subject "Plaintiffs" is "submit"). In the same sentence, it is proper to say "their motion” (i.e., the plaintiffs’ motion), not “its motion.” The semi-colon in the sentence should be preceded by a colon after the word “motion[s].” Otherwise, the use of the semi-colon is inappropriate. The “as follows” at the end of the paragraph is likely a remnant from an earlier complaint and is grammatically incorrect. Rather, the paragraph should end with a period after “23(g).” Furthermore, the MLP Group never provides an adequate explanation of why it is moving to consolidate cases that the Court previously consolidated.⁶

We could continue – at some length – but we have made our point.⁷ Particularly in a case involving the publishing industry and the manner in which a book was edited, it is not too much to demand that the principal representatives of the Class utilize proper grammar and diction. The MLP Group’s counsel have failed miserably in that regard.

Thus, as Plaintiff Rubenstein demonstrated previously, no legitimate question exists that objective Class members would prefer that SSB and Kalcheim Salah serve as the Class’s primary counsel. Accordingly, Rule 23(g) dictates that Rubenstein's motion for the appointment of interim counsel should be granted in all respects.

CONCLUSION

For all of the reasons set forth above, in Plaintiff Rubenstein's moving papers and in her opposition to the MLP Group's motion, the Court should appoint SSB and Kalcheim Salah as interim counsel for the putative class.
